What have they said?

Posted on 21 September 2011

We've had contributions from several prominent Australians on our blog. To see or read their contributions click on the links below.

- Richard Aedy (Life Matters on ABC Radio National)
- Michael Stutchbury (The Australian)
- Dick Smith
- Mark Donaldson VC

We realise that they are all men. We are trying to get several female contributors as well. Hopefully in the coming weeks you will see some.

I question if the ABS does ask the right questions during a census. Social indicators can be gleaned from sources such as Medicare, Centrelink, ATO etc. This years Census Data would only reflect that information. Poverty and wealth distribution and the factors involved can only be fully gauged by asking candid questions anonymously; we are not a trusting society when it comes to being honest about our lifestyle and true wealth.

Hi Jasmine. Thanks for the comment. ABS collects more detailed information in our household and business surveys that we can't collect from the Census. Heres is a list of the current household surveys.
